

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method including searching for a communication channel by activating a receiver having a radio frequency (RF) module and a baseband module for storing a portion of received signals within a first time period, de-activating the RF module of the receiver, and background processing the portion of the received signals with a variable clock rate within a second time period.